Catholic registers available here are nearly always written in Latin with the exception of some very recent registers. To help the searcher understand the meaning of the Latin parts of the registers, a copy of a baptism, marriage and death entry is shown below with a translation.

Please note that the main difference between Latin and English is that in English the position of a word in a sentence will generally show how the word being used, whereas in Latin it is the ending of a word which indicates its function and so word endings do change.

A list of the more common Latin Christian names with their English equivalent is included. The endings of these names will also be different depending on their position and meaning in the register entry. Also, the most common ending for a male name is "us" and for female "a". Sometimes the male and female version of a name can be shown by the ending e.g. Patricius/Patricia - Patrick/Patricia.
